4a	(Code)	(Expenses $ 1,189,728	including grants of $ 53,402	) (Revenue $ 43,033)
Our core program focuses on building a sustainable network of coalitions, developing leaders, and empowering working people. This is accomplished by providing financial, technical, and educational resources to more than 45 local Jobs with Justice Chapters. This support enables the Chapters to conduct outreach and education on workers' rights issues, and to engage in workplace justice and community campaigns focused on issues such as access to health care, labor law reform, global justice, immigration reform, and a people's economic recovery plan. The support we provided enabled the coalitions to work on 139 community campaigns, 111 workplace justice campaigns affecting more than 135,000 workers. Key national projects in fulfilling our mission included: (1) the Student Labor Action Project develops student leaders and engages them in workers' rights and community campaigns; (2) the Workers' Rights Board Project provides education on our core issues to prominent community and religious leaders through public hearings at the national and local levels; and, (3) the Young Worker Project develops creative models for cultivating leadership among young workers and engaging them on workplace justice issues. Finally, our National Training and Leadership Development Program trains hundreds of members a year, while facilitating cross training opportunities across a broad network of staff and leaders. Our goal is to build relationships and collaborate with other organizations and networks to build a grassroots movement of individuals committed to winning social and economic justice.
